The Century. Mr. Clark Russell's new novel, " A Sea-Queen," is to appear first in this country in the pages of Har-per's Weekly. William Black's "Yolande" will be published first in the Bazar.

Mr. Austin Dobson's poem in the next Harper-" a proper new ballad of the country and the town "chants most daintily the charms of " Phyllida, my Phyllida," a buxom rustic maiden.

Science, the new illustrated weekly, will make Its first appearance in Cambridge early next month. The leading scientific men of the country will contribute to its pages.

Mr. Edwin A. Abbey has made a beautiful iliustration for Mr. S. S. Conant's " Faustus "-a striking poem which will appear with the picture in an early number of Harper's Magazine.

Lord Otho ritzgerald, the handsome young Englishman who died of blood-poisoning the other day, is said to have been the original of the agreeable nobleman in Mr. Henry James's novel of "The Por-

The French Academy is more than ever the subjec of jokes because of its Dictionary which, begun two hundred years ago, has hardly made any progress vet. Charles Nodier, writing to a friend, says: You ask me when the Dictionary of the French Academy will be finished 7 Nostradamus could not reply to the question. For myself I am firmly of epinion that the Academy will be finished before its Dictionary."

The St. James's Gazette of London says: "The notion that Mr. Elbridge Kingsley's "Wood, Engraving from Nature" in the current number of The Century is an entirely novel method, is erroneous. Bewick constantly engraved direct from nature, and unless we are much mistaken, Mr. W. J. Linton and other living wood-engravers have often worked in this way. Indeed, no really good wood-engraver would trust entirely to memory or to the design on the block if he could have in front of him the object, the view, or the picture to be reproduced. This is particularly true where the design has been placed on the block by photography, for photography invariably gives false values, and very often distorted outlines: faults which the new-style American, wood-engravers render as a rule with remarkable precision. Nor is there anything new in the fact that Mr. Kingsley executed his block almost entirely with one tool: Mr. Linton's gravers are of the fewest, and perhaps the finest landscape he has done was cut with one tool. Yet it shows a variety of textures, an expressiveness of handling and a vigor of style which Mr. Kingsley's pretty work entirely lacks."

MR. BLACKMORE'S CELEBRATED WORK

LORNA DOONE. One volume, Crown quarto, 550 pp., gilt edges. Price, $10.

This is a most beautiful edition, issued by the English publishers of "forma Doone" in response to frequent applications from the many admirers of the celebrated novel. The numerous illustrations, scattered through the sumptnovaly printed text, represent the picturesque scenery of Levon and Somerset and studies of many of the leading events, scenes, characters, and incidents of the story. The edition which we have secured for the American market is very limited, and early application to your bookseller may be limited, and early application to your bookseller may be necessary to secure a copy of what will certainly be found of the most, if not the most, attractive illustrated gift book of the year.

FLORENCE. Its History-The Medicis-Its Scho ars, Architecture, Painting, Sculpture, &c. By Charles Yriarte, author of "Venice," &c. Illustrated by over 500 photogravures and engravings. 1 vol., folio, richly bound in cloth extra, gilt edges, morecco backs, $20; or in full merocco, $28.

A really great gift-book inevitably requires a really great subject. And what subject could be better than Florence, with its memories of Danie and Boccaccio, Michael Angelo and Gallieo, Machiavelli and Savonarola—"the fair, the happy, the glorious Florence," as Macaulay describes it in one of the most Corintbian, but also one of the best of his caller essays—"the halls which rang with the mirth of Pulci, the cell where twinkled the midnight lamp of Politian, the statues on which the young eyes of Michael Angelo giared with the frenzy of kindred inspiration, the gardens in which Lorenco meditated some sparkling song for the May-day dance of the Strurian virgins "I Florence, in its brightest days, seems to have been the very impersonation alike of what was richest in the Pagan Renaissance, and of what was most grandiose in Christian art; and a thoroughly well-executed Florence illustrated ought to be as inspiring and as promptly stimulating as a sonnet by a master-hand.

While the text is to some extent subordinate to the illustrate

While the text is to some extent subordinate to the illustra-tions, at the same time the historical portion of the work, especially the history of the De Medici family, is clear and impartial, and the sketches of "Illustrions Florentines" are crammed with lacts. The book will, however, be judged by its litustrations, which are 500 in number, and in all essentials what they should be.

In respect of the historical and biographical illustrations it is especially fascinating. On every page some face—a Cosmoo or a Lorenzo, a poet, a priest or a painter—is sure to catch the eye, and is almost certain to conjure up a brilliant or a tragic career.

Whoever wishes to understand the extraordinary extravagances of the Renaissance in Italy should look at the pictures here given of the allegories actually represented on the occasion of Blanca Capello's marriage with the Grand Duke Francesco, when, among other freaks, "men and women had their bodies painted with gold, that they might represent the deities of Olympus," Still more generally attractive than even the portraits will probably be found the numerous and admirable specimens of the treasures of the Pitti Palace and of Florentine art generally. These, however, are too well known to need spectalization or enumeration. We have said enough of the most sumptions work of the gift book type that has lately been published, and which, from its very character, calls for the criticism of the eye is ther than of the pen.
